See 15 Exceptional Finds at Masterpiece London

Coline Milliard, Saturday, June 28, 2014

Now in its fifth edition, London's Masterpiece has finally found its place in the crowded art fair calendar. Even contemporary art champions Jay Joplin and Charles Saatchi made it to the VIP opening on June 25, which also welcomed designer Tom Ford and rock star Rod Stewart.

Described by a dealer as a "snapshot of TEFAF with an English eccentric twist," Masterpiece hosts over 150 dealers with an offer spanning 3,000 years of art and design. It's a place for enlightened amateurs, as keen on French furniture as they might be on diamond earrings, painting, or Victoriana. This year, the fair also boasts a sculpture park retracing the career of modern British sculpture Phillip King, courtesy of Thomas Dane Gallery.

The Chelsea fair is a great opportunity to dig out exceptional, rare, or quirky pieces – some of them all of above. artnet News takes its pick.

Breathing Pillow, Leila Heller Gallery

An uncanny contraption by the Swiss designer Rolf Sachs, poetic and creepy in equal measures. It makes an unexpected centerpiece for a booth dedicated to the likes of Mimmo Rotella, Maurice Estève, and Jean Dubuffet.
