Step inside a Hermes boutique and what do you find? Wall to wall luxury, with hand crafted bags, the finest silk scarves and the very best in clothes. Well, look a little harder and more often than not, you will also find a unique and talented artist being showcased. Thanks to Hermes' interest and dedication to the world of art, their boutiques and window displays offer so much more than another luxury shopping experience.

Next month, from November 7 to January 31 2015, Korean born Ran Hwang will be showing her intricate, simple yet spectacular works at the Hermes flagship boutique on Orchard Road. Taking inspiration from the fact that beauty can be found anywhere, even in the most ordinary of things, she has taken a range of materials including buttons, string and plexiglass to create some of the most beautiful and thought provoking pieces. Hwang focuses on phoenixes and peonies, taking inspiration from the power of grace, strength and renewal they hold in the East, she uses them to echo the transient nature of life that she hopes to show through her work.

The Ran Hwang exhibition will be taking place from 7 November 2014 to 31 January 2015 at Hermes, 541 Orchard Road.
